Chennai, India, December 03, 2009 – Advanced Distributed Learning (ADL) has recognized White House Business Solutions (WHBS) as an ADL partner for the contributions and support extended to SCORM Adopter Initiative of ADL. ADL has also added WHBS in its Partners list as a SCORM Adopter Partner.

SCORM Adopters are organizations that practice the adoption of SCORM related specifications through the design and development of SCORM 2004 conformant products and services as evidenced by using the most recent version of the Conformance Test Suite for the respective SCORM version.

“Today SCORM has become one of the critical requirements for e-learning content and the applications that deliver the e-learning content. At White House Business Solutions, it has always been a practice to adopt widely accepted international standards and specifications such as SCORM for any content or applications we develop. We are very much pleased to get the recognition as SCORM Adopter from ADL” says Mr. Mohammed Sadiq, Director – Business Development – WHBS.

The ADL initiative is a Department-wide strategy developed by the Department of Defense (DoD) to harness the power of learning and information technologies to standardize and modernize education and training in 1997. The ADL Initiative develops and implements learning technologies across the U.S. Department of Defense and federal government. ADL collaborates with government, industry, and academia to promote international specifications and standards for designing and delivering learning content.
