The new iPhone Application Masalapedia, a unique way of translation of masala (spice) name in different languages.

Indore India—Dec 29, 2009—CDN Solutions Group today introduced the new iPhone Application Masalapedia, which provide info about spices, a unique way of translation of masala (spice) name in different languages.

The application is of great help to all those people who have passion, willingness or necessity of Indian cooking but face situations such as unawareness of English names of masala, they can read and understand the names but when they go out to buy, it is difficult to explain MASALA names to the shopkeeper and also that many people do not understand English. Masalapedia addresses each of these problems by helping translate masala (spice) name to English, German, French, Italian and Spanish.

“Cooking Indian food is going to be easy with Masala Pedia. The lite version is free for all with 20 masala (spice) names that can really come in handy when you are cooking or shopping” said Chetan Naik, CDN’s CTO. English is the paid version with 94 masala counts available and English Lite is the only free version with 20 masala counts. The application can be easily downloaded from Apple store.
