In Week 17 of the NFL Season, StinkBall.com Fantasy Football started a special contest: The 2009 Vernon Davis StinkBall Challenge. The contest runs 4 weeks and each week the first place StinkBall member receives an autographed football signed by #85 of the San Francisco 49ers. On January 15, 2010 StinkBall.com announced the second week's winner: Zach Pratt, owner of the team Playoff Killa. Next, on January 22, 2010 the third week's winner was announced: Michael Caufield, owner of the team NY2ThaBay.

2009 was the first year for StinkBall.com and the site offers a new twist on fantasy football. Instead of choosing the best players, members must predict that week's worst performances and build a team of the poorest players. Teams are awarded points for fumbles, sacks and interceptions. Stinkball.com requires no draft and members complete weekly lineups from a database of NFL players. Teams are free and members can also start public and private leagues.

Stinkball.com is owned and operated by fantasy football fanatic and expert, Jason McCoy, a pioneer of a fantasy genre he calls "fallacy sports". Fallacy sports is focused on games where members must predict poor performances in order to win. The idea is to give experienced fantasy players a more challenging experience unlike other fantasy websites. In order to win members must use unique strategies and think about sports in a way they generally don't.

"Stinkball.com is so excited about working with Vernon Davis this season as he continues to establish himself as both an NFL and fantasy football superstar. In 2009," states McCoy, "Vernon is showing the fans and fantasy players what he is really made of and we expect his talent and strength to add a lot to the fantasy experience over the next few years". The final Vernon Davis Challenge winner will be announced the eek of January 25, 2010.
