One element of corporate fiduciary duties is to ensure that employees return safely from their business trips. The practical belief of many employers is that they are compliant with these duties by having proper medical insurance for their employees while they are on a business trip. This belief has some risky elements as insurance in general is only a reactive way to cope with the problem. If something happens on a business trip because the employer saved money by letting the employee stay in a hotel located in a high-crime part of the foreign capital or because he was used as a cash messenger for the subsidiary then the insurance will likely claim restitution from the employer for gross negligence.

Most important element of good business trip security is to adhere to predefined safety standards and prevention. Prevention is the key to minimizing personal and corporate risks of business travel. Dr. Lange Consulting have now released an interactive E-Learning tutorial that addresses specific risks for business travelers. The computer based training is focused on risk prevention in all phases of a business trip, e.g. while being at the airport, in hotels, taxis or public transport. Moreover, a large part of the training is dedicated to specific advice for female business travelers. The learner will finally get a good perception of typical fraud scams related to business travel and tips for proper defense behavior.

The training is based on safety know how from international security experts as well as input from frequent travelers. A multiple choice test at the end of the training guarantees effective know how transfer and allows documentation for the employer that staff was trained as a preventive measure in terms of fiduciary duties. Please check General Travel Security at slideshare.net for more details and information.

Dr. Lange Consulting is focused on services such as Internal Audit, Anti-Fraud-Management, Corporate Compliance and Travel Security. The company is consequently developing and applying E-Learning-solutions in its areas of expertise. These computer based trainings serve the demand for cost efficient prevention solutions and effective knowledge transfer to employees. Training and test modules regularly enable corporations to document adherence to fiduciary and compliance duties.
