Tutors International London, a specialist provider of private SAT tuition for students in London who wish to apply to American universities, has launched a new American college advice and support package. The new offering is a comprehensive service providing a total US university application solution; from initial thoughts about studying in the US to a fully complete college application. For more information, visit www.tutors-international.com or call +44 (0) 1865 435 135.

"The need for an advisory service that supports the SAT tuition we provide in London became apparent over the last year," explained Adam Caller, founder of Tutors International London. "When a child educated in the British school system decides to attend a university in America, their parents are often intimidated by the amount of research required to understand the US college application process. It can be hard to find a reliable and knowledgeable source of information, as there are few experts on the American college application process working in the British school system. Parents want to be able to support their child as best they can through that challenging time, and to do so they need detailed information about the requirements and timeline involved."

"The new service is designed to provide guidance, expertise and practical help to students and their families throughout the entire journey," Adam continued, "from initial thoughts about potential colleges, through to interview preparation. It includes the development of a strong extra-curricular profile, advice and assistance with college visits, the securing of suitable and strong letters of recommendation and help with the preparation of the application including understanding the paperwork. That is something that many students and parent find incredibly daunting. We also provide support for essay writing. Tutors International London has extensive experience of the US college applications process," Adam added, "and I am the only person in the UK with membership of the Independent Educational Consultants Association assessed as being qualified to give advice on College applications. I'm confident that the parents of students in London preparing to apply for American colleges will find all of the help they need from this new service."
