CommonPlaces e-Solutions, LLC, an open source Web Application and Drupal development firm, is thrilled to announce that Michelle Lauer has been selected by the Drupal community to present "Views Examples: Using Arguments and Relationships" at DrupalCon San Francisco, which will be held from April 19-21.

DrupalCon is the twice-yearly gathering of the Drupal community to learn about, discuss, and advance the Drupal platform. Drupalers also use this conference as an opportunity to network with other community members from around the world. Conference attendees include Drupal community leaders, top developers, contributed module maintainers, members of the Drupal Association, potential business partners, and employers.

In her session, Michelle (or "Miche," as she is known in Drupal circles) will share a repeatable strategy for using arguments and relationships with Drupal Views to display specific subsets of content. From a simple list of all nodes in a single content type, to a complex collection of related information, Michelle's session will demonstrate a systematic approach to building all views and show examples of using arguments and relationships. "Michelle embodies the community spirit of Open Source development," expressed CommonPlaces COO Michael Fairbrother. "She is an excellent speaker with a passion for sharing her engineering knowledge. Her enthusiasm is truly contagious. We're all very proud that Michelle was selected by the community to represent the CommonPlaces' team at another Drupal event."

Lauer has successfully represented CommonPlaces e-Solutions and impressed international audiences with presentations that include "Staging Drupal" (delivered with Chris Pliakas) at DrupalCon Paris and "Advanced Views Examples" at DrupalCamp Montreal. She actively participates in various Drupal groups and events throughout Boston and New England, and is currently organizing the first DrupalCamp NH, which will be held in Manchester later this spring.
