DT Communications Asia Pacific (DT Asia) recently visited three project sites that Taipei Environmental Protection Administration (EPA) is using to significantly lower carbon emissions. Worth over NT$1 billion in investments, the projects include the BaLi Incineration Plan, a low-carbon emission tourist resort called PingLin, and Tamsui Park – Taiwan's largest wetland ecological park. DT Asia joined together with Taipei EPA's high-level leadership to release a comprehensive, cross-straits, and environmental development research report.

DT Asia's General Manager, Ms. Alice Fok Ka Yee, and her team first visited the BaLi Incineration Plant, and saw it to have in-depth understanding for the development of Taiwan's environmental protection facilities. Soon after and accompanied by Taipei EPA's leadership, Ms. Alice Fok and her associates on a tour of low-carbon emitting tourist area, Pinglin, and Tamsui Park, finding that these two famous, low emissions projects left a profound impression on environmental protection and praised the direction Taipei has taken in developing their tourist industry.

After the tour, DT Asia representatives and Taipei EPA leaders and persons in charge engaged in an exchange and discussion about environmental protection, which lead to both sides having a comprehensive understanding and analysis of the development of these three environmental projects.

Ms. Alice Fok said, "The three low emissions projects we visited have numerous benefits, and Taiwan's strides in and contributions to environmental protection deserve further study. I hope more enterprises will join the cause to protect the environment, collaboratively making progress.
