BizFriends.com, a new social networking site, has appointed a PR Consultant to write and send press releases. The site provides a community for business networking and promotion.

Citrus Heights, CA -- Rob Clark of BizFriends.com has announced the appointment of David M. Bresnahan, a PR consultant, to write and send press releases for the social networking site designed for businesses and entrepreneurs.

Business owners and entrepreneurs who would like to network with others to promote their products and services, and find needed products and services have been banned from MySpace and other social networking sites. Clark saw a real need and filled it with a new social networking site that offers business owners, entrepreneurs, and business opportunity seekers the help they need.

Clark created www.BizFriendz.com with many unique tools and resources designed to help business networking.

The site offers many unique networking features designed to help entrepreneurs market their business opportunity, and enable others who are looking for a new business to be able to easily find a good match. BizFriendz itself is a business opportunity that is unique in the world of social networking web sites. Members can refer others to join the BizFriendz community and earn commissions for doing so.

BizFriendz was created to do exactly what the other social networking sites do not allow, network with business owners and find people to do business with.

"How do you think the majority of new business deals, and highly profitable joint ventures and partnerships culminate? It's by interacting with other like-minded people and developing new business contacts and building relationships with these people that you can potentially make an outrageous fortune," said Clark.

Bresnahan owns www.ThatPRGuy.com where he offers personalized services to write and distribute press releases and other public relations services. ThatPRGuy specializes in creating Internet publicity that brings added traffic to web sites and increases web site ranking and placement in search engines.
