Cape Town, 22 June 2010 – Two members of the MeinSchreibservice.de staff watched the World Cup game between Germany and Serbia live. They watched the game in the Nelson-Mandela-Bay Stadium in the coastal city of Port Elizabeth and enthusiastically joined in the festivities.

Both interns, Kathleen Greibich and Manuela Hufnagel were lucky enough to do their practical training in South Africa during the time of the FIFA World Cup at MeinSchreibservice.de, the online writing office. MeinSchreibservice.de does transcriptions and translations and caters for all other writing needs. The two football fans were therefore able to watch the game between Italy and Paraguay but were also able to experience the game played by their national team up close.

After a successful working week in which new typists were recruited, offers were written, writing contracts were negotiated and processed, they were on their way to Port Elizabeth, a city in the Eastern Cape province of South Africa. There they met countless German fans who showed their anticipation for the game by dancing, singing and wearing black, red and gold outfits. The match started in the shining sun, unfortunately, the fans of the German team were not able to enjoy such a shining end. After a number of yellow cards a red card and an unlucky twelve meter the German team were beaten by the strong Serbian side.

“Even though our team did not win, it was a great weekend in PE. To watch a World Cup game live is really something special. But I was also happy to be back in Cape Town, my new home. I didn’t think I would miss my current hometown so fast;” Manuela Hufnagel noted directly after the game. After the interesting practical at MeinSchreibservice.de, where interns are able to get an overall impression in the field of work and responsibility in a writing office and who are responsible for independent projects and tasks, there are many exciting things to experience in the attractive city of Cape Town.
