Mintek Mobile Data Solutions Inc. announced today that as part of the CMMS contest, the winner will receive the additional benefits of an Enterprise Asset Management (EAM) system designed for asset intensive organizations. EAM applications are important for most industries in order to meet the challenges of better asset management from the planning stages through replacement.

The contest which begins August 25, 2010 includes:

- 1 Site License for 1 Year
- 10 User Web and Mobile Licenses for 1 Year
- Set-up and implementation services
- Training and Support

Transcendent® EAM features for facilities, plant and property managers includes tools such as Capital budget analysis, document and contract collection and the enabling of standard maintenance practices. When this information is combined with the maintenance history collected by the CMMS, facility managers will have a powerful tool that can be used to project capital needs as well as manage the entire lifecycle of assets.

“In today’s competitive economy it is critical that industries plan their asset management needs,” says Kevin McConnell of Mintek. Kevin adds, “An EAM system gives facility managers the tools needed to obtain a higher ROA.”

Lind Hutton, CEO of Mintek says, “Enterprise Asset Management is the key to better asset maintenance and management because it enables facilities management to manage the entire lifecycle of assets from planning through retirement.”
