Convenient, Secure, Confidential Mailboxes Protect Identity for Home-Based and Small Business

SANTA BARBARA, CA – In the age of Google Maps, any customer of a home-based business can quickly pin point the exact location of the home-based residence, learn how much a home-based business pays in property tax and note the bougainvillea blooming in a neighbor's backyard. Personal information has never been easier to access with the shift to what Bloomberg Newsweek calls "Homepreneurs", home-front businesses that now account for over 50% of all U.S. companies. According to a 2009 Federal Trade Commission report, identity theft is the fastest growing crime in the U.S. accounting for 21% of all fraudulent claims filed in 2009. Pack and Post Office Solutions mailboxes offer a secure and confidential way to regain privacy and protection of personal assets with convenient mailbox rentals that give a real physical address away from home, for real peace of mind.

Where once a storefront created a buffer of personal privacy against disgruntled customers and off-hour deliveries, the home-based entrepreneur is left open to an assortment of unsavory scenarios that infringe on personal time and space. Since freight couriers such as FedEx require a physical address for package delivery, a business that uses a P.O. Box is still required to divulge private information when placing orders for goods and merchandise.

"Pack and Post Office Solutions solves a lot of potential issues for home-based or small business entrepreneurs. Our mailboxes provide a real physical address that gives businesses a sense of permanence as well as a convenient, secure, and confidential place to receive mail and packages even when [they are] not home. It's really the most secure way to ensure privacy in the digital age," commented Jeremy Bodenhamer, Owner of Pack and Post Office Solutions.

With extensive experience in small business management and profitability, Bodenhamer credits his company's success to his commitment to service. "We've been serving the community since 1982, providing a local alternative for all our customer's needs. Most of our business is based solely on referrals. Our customers recognize the value of strong customer service and how it affects their bottom line," he notes.

Part of Bodenhamer's commitment to customer service is keeping the utmost standards in confidentiality, while also shopping the market to keep his rates below any other independent competitor in town, a claim he guarantees. By providing a real physical address and all the conveniences of a personal assistant, Pack and Post Office Solutions is the one place that helps keep home-based businesses secure and organized, allowing them to stay focused on customers.
