Gloucestershire, United Kingdom (27 August 2010) – Burleigh Travel, leading UK suppliers of fully-inclusive sports tours, announce that they are now offering packages to Singapore for those looking to discover more about sport in South East Asia.

The majority of travellers stay in Singapore only as a go-between when making their way toward Australia and New Zealand. Burleigh Travel however believe there is scope for sports tours across South East Asia, and that there is a rich history of sport in the country for holiday-makers to explore and discover.

Singapore's colonial history has ensured that sports such as football, rugby, hockey, netball and cricket are all widely played by those living in the region. Alongside its sporting history, Singapore is also a fabulous holiday destination, boasting attractions such as Universal Studios, Sentosa Island Beach and Leisure Complex, an Island Night Zoo and much more besides.

“We're delighted to be able to offer our customers trips to Singapore for competitive rates. Not only is it a beautiful destination with a broad range of incredible things to see and do, it also has a rich cultural sporting heritage because of its colonial past,” comments Chris Kite, director of Burleigh Travel. “Singapore itself is usually overlooked as a sporting holiday destination as people work their way toward more popular areas such as Australia and New Zealand. We're looking to promote Singapore as a sporting destination in its own right, especially as the area is so friendly and has low rates of crime.”
