Press release from: Teslain, Ltd.

Teslain's Rohos Logon Key v.2.0 converts any USB drive into an access key for Microsoft Windows, replacing the Windows Login. You simply insert the key to sign on. You can configure it to log off, hibernate, or shut down when the key is removed. One PC can accept multiple keys, and one key can be configured to unlock multiple PCs.

This is how Rohos Logon Key 2.0 works. Rather than entering one's logon name and password upon startup, a person simply inserts USB drive. The drive contains login and password information that is entered automatically. If the program can't find identification file (i.e. another USB drive was used), no access to protected PC data will be granted.

Rohos Logon Key v.2.0 is a major release, and has a lot of new features and improvements including Windows Vista support and network version with 60-day trial time. Rohos Logon Key also supports U3 smart USB flash drives. Moreover, higher USB Key Security provides you with 2-factor logon with PIN code, and USB key copy protection.

Now the program supports all major Windows logon services: Local login, Network/AD login, Novell Client login, Remote desktop login. It does not disable nwgina.dll or msgina.dll activity.

A business license costs USD $35.00. A personal license costs USD $25.00. 15-day free trial is available at www.rohos.com/logon-key/

System Requirements: Windows XP / 2000 / 2003
