Press release from: Imperato For President 2008

West Palm Beach, FL – February 28, 2008 - In a reiteration of his previous release, 2008 Presidential Candidate Daniel Imperato, stressed the need for America to look into who their candidates really are for 2008.

In his previous release Imperato stated, ""People of the United States, don't be fooled by looks, because they only run skin deep. You need to look inside these presidential candidates and take their temperature. Look at their background. Look at what they've achieved, and analyze their ability to change course for the United States, and its people."

Just 3 years ago, Democratic Candidate, Barack Hussein Obama, was a little known state senator from Illinois who, after losing a contested race for the US House of Representatives, faced a conveniently uncontested race for a seat in the United States Senate.

The Republican Frontrunner for the 2004 Illinois US Senate seat was Jack Ryan, who according to court documents filed in a 2000 divorce, took his wife to "sex clubs and asked her to engage in sexual activity in front of other patrons" ("Ex-Wife of GOP Senate Candidate Alleged Sex Club Forays", CNN. June 22, 2004.)

In addition, while Barack Hussein Obama was a political unknown in 1995, he wrote an autobiography, Dreams from My Father: A Story of Race and Inheritance.

In the book, Obama acknowledges that he used cocaine as a high school student but rejected heroin. "Pot had helped, and booze; maybe a little blow when you could afford it," he said.

Although eager to point out his marijuana, alcohol and cocaine habit, Barack Hussein Obama was quick to reject an addiction to crack cocaine.

"I blew a few smoke rings, remembering those years...Not smack, though - Mickey, my potential initiator, had been just a little too eager for me to go through with that.. Said he could do it blindfolded, but he was shaking like a faulty engine when he said it..."

"Junkie. Pothead. That's where I'd been headed; the final fatal role of the would-be black man."

The words "Junkie" and "Pothead" are hardly the descriptions of a would-be president.

During Imperato's previous press release he asked the American people, "Would you put your children's lives in the hands of these candidates?"

One of the most prominent American families has been the Clintons, who are now led by 2008 Presidential Candidate Hillary Clinton.

Hillary Clinton has a history of ignoring facts. In 2003 autobiography, Living History, Hillary Clinton commented on the Monica Lewinsky scandal.

She stated, "For me, the Lewinsky imbroglio seemed like just another vicious scandal manufactured by political opponents" ("Hillary's 'outrage' at Clinton Lies", BBC News June 4, 2003.)

Hillary Clinton said that, before Bill Clinton's bedside confession, she had believed he had merely been foolish in paying any attention to Monica Lewinsky or any of the other allegations.

Apparently she forgot about Jennifer Flowers and her sexual allegations against Bill Clinton.

Hillary Clinton appeared on 60 Minutes with Bill Clinton in 1992 where Bill Clinton stated, "I have acknowledged causing pain in my marriage", a guilt-free confession to the American public.

Bill Clinton was later exposed by his own voice on an audiotape telling Jennifer Flowers to deny everything.

But neither Jennifer Flowers' audiotapes nor Bill Clinton's DNA on Monica Lewinsky's dress were sufficient to apprise Hillary Clinton.

Then again there was Paula Jones, Katherine Willy, and the litany of other women who had come forward with Bill Clinton's sexual infidelity.

According to Hillary Clinton, the only mistake that was made was a public relations mistake.

In her account she acknowledges only "public relations mistakes in how we handled the growing controversy." ("Hillary's 'outrage' at Clinton Lies", BBC News June 4, 2003.)

There was no mention of lying to the American public, and obstructing our legal system..

Hillary Clinton did acknowledge that Bill Clinton's lies to the American people although "morally wrong but not a betrayal of the public." (Associated Press. "Hillary Clinton Book Acknowledges Lewinsky Affair", June 04, 2003.)

Imperato also previously asked the American people to save their hard earned money for their children and not for the hands of politicians.

Imperato stated, "This country, and its election process, have become about good looks and large pocketbooks. I say ask yourself, who is your president, or who is your next president? I ask the American people to save their money, and to give me their vote."

In today's Melbourne Sun, it was reported that Senator Hillary Clinton failed to disclose a family charity she operates with former president Bill Clinton that has enabled the couple to write off more than $US5 million ($6.3 million) in taxable income since 2001.

The matter has been reported to the US Senate Ethics Committee.

Among the institutions receiving grants from the Clinton Family Foundation were Yale University, where both attended law school; groups named for dead heads of state in Israel and Jordan; and a charity connected to the Arkansas businessman who helped Hillary Clinton make $100,000 on a commodities trade that caused controversy a decade ago, Internal Revenue Service reports show.

Imperato concluded his previous release with the following comments, "Forget the looks. Vote for the best and forget the rest. In my opinion, the best is someone that knows fact and solutions, someone that acts quickly and gains respect from the entire global community. America needs someone to prove to the people on a chart, like Ross Perot did, why the American people should vote for their next president. In my opinion, I should be looked at very seriously because I am the one to draw lines in sand, based on facts and solution."
