(March 30, 2007 - Denver, Colorado) In 1970, a double murder took place at the Lumber Baron Inn in Denver, Colorado that still remains unsolved. At the time, the popular bed and breakfast that the Inn is today, was converted into apartments. Occupying one of the apartments was a 17 year old run-away girl. Her life came to a brutal end one night when she was raped and murdered. An 18 year old friend of hers who stumbled upon the murder was also killed. There have been reports of several haunting incidences, including sightings of a girl. Footsteps have been heard and seen on the squeaky steps

Haunted Times will be conducting a Ghost Hunter University at the Inn on April 7th, led by Christopher Moon, renowned paranormal investigator and founder of Haunted Times. Chris and his team have already been there several times before. Each time they attempt to contact the girls and have had remarkable success in reaching them. They were first able to reach the 17 year old. It took several more attempts before they were able to reach the 18 year old as well. When they make contact, they ask the girls to provide them details of the murders including those of the perpetrator or perpetrators.

Dina Everling, part of the Haunted Times team says, "The Lumber Baron experiences are always tough. We want so desperately to help the two murdered girls come to some peace with their deaths. Until the murderer is finally arrested and convicted, I don't think that will happen. The girls replay their attack every day, and you can always feel the horror they felt on that fateful day."

Using a piece of equipment, that Moon refers to as Thomas Edison's telephone to the dead, he and his team are able to pick up Electronic Voice Phenomena (EVP's) from a location's ghostly residents. "The apparatus provides an electronic media through which the spirits can communicate," explains Moon. "We have had amazing results using this tool. We have been able to communicate with passed loved ones including those who were victims of murder."

Thus far, the girls have provided Moon and his team with several details including names. To date, the investigation continues.

Perhaps at some point, using the scientific methods stressed by Christopher Moon during Ghost Hunter University, enough information will be gathered to solve the murders and two young girls who met a tragic end will finally rest in peace.
