Atlanta, GA – Local entrepreneur Mom Carrie Lauth (atlantanetworkinggirls.com) announces that she is priming up for the exciting launch of her monthly networking dinners for women in business.

The first dinner is to be held on April 30, 2007 at 7pm to 9:30pm. It will take place in Fairburn, GA at Miss Lila's Tea Room located at 110 Broad Street. Atlanta Networking Girls will specialize in helping women develop their business through networking events.

These exclusive events are designed as a way for women to expand their connections and resources, gain new customers, and make friends.

Bestselling business and success author Harvey Mackay states that "Networking is the most important business tool" in his book, Dig Your Well Before You're Thirsty. "Although many of the participants will enjoy immediate profits from meeting new clients and customers, the greater benefit from networking comes from the relationships that are developed," says Carrie Lauth the woman behind Atlanta Networking Girls. "It's a wonderful way for women to interact with others who have similar aspirations and build resources that will be available to them during challenges."

Forming beneficial associations with other members can mean great news for your business. Carrie is enabling women a comfortable platform for self promotion as well as a venue to cultivate relationships.

When asked who should attend Networking Girls, Carrie says, "There is no specific business that you have to be doing to attend. Whether you're a small or large business owner, work at home Mom, a direct sales marketer, a real estate agent, or an online business owner, you're welcome to join us."

Isn't it time you experienced the excitement of a networking event? With a sumptuous dinner, prizes and a small $30.00 fee, you can't afford to miss this event!
