Cologne, 2 April 2007; Cologne based Imageloop GmbH appoints Robert Stupp as new CTO (Chief Technology Officer). The IT expert will be responsible for the technical system of the company. This includes the ongoing development of the innovative 'Web 2.0' slideshow service as well as the entire operation of the system.

As co-founder of the company and staff member from the very beginning Robert Stupp laid down the basis for the technical development of imageloop's core application. Robert Stupp is renowned in the Internet sector for his outstanding skills in the programming of management systems dealing with user generated content.

About imageloop

Imageloop allows 'Web 2.0' users to create and design their own animated slideshows for displaying digital photos. These slideshows can be published on blogs, on community sites such as MySpace and can also be used on the desktop. Imageloop is easy to use and no technical expertise is required. Users will also find numerous community functions on the imageloop homepage. To gain full access to this service and to avail of imageloop software, users need only complete the free registration on the imageloop site. Please see www.imageloop.co.uk for further information. At the time being, imageloop is the sole European service comparable to the American providers Slide.com and Rockyou.
