LogoBee invited to catch some of the action

Two of LogoBee's designers were invited to Mel's Studio in Montreal last night for an amazing night of boxing. Last year, LogoBee had worked hard to create a logo design for the Trans American Boxing Championship Belt with Quebec's Boxing Commissioner Mario Latraverse. Last night they were rewarded for their efforts with two ringside press seats to one of TAB's events organized in collaboration with the World Boxing Council (WBC). We were able to get up close and personal to the boxers and personalities at the event, and even got to see the TAB Championship Belt sporting the logo designed by LogoBee, which has been carefully engraved into a shiny piece of hardware.

There were 5 matches in all. The headline event featured local (Montreal, QC) light heavyweight Adrian Diaconu facing up against American Rico Hoye. Though almost six inches shorter, 28 year old Diaconu showed that he was powerful enough to overcome the apparent height and reach mismatch. He pressured Hoye in the first two rounds, knocking him almost out of the ring in the 2nd. The third round proved disastrous for Hoye as a bad cut opened up over his left eye, leaving the referee no choice to stop the fight.

Although the main event was stopped well short of 12 rounds, the audience was in high spirits as they celebrated Diaconu's entertaining victory. Diaconu remains undefeated at 24-0, and will likely get a chance to fight for the WBC title against American Chad Dawson in the coming months.
