DALLAS, TX, May 15, 2007— Mercury Communication Services Inc., a leading provider of voice and data communications solutions for Texas businesses, today announced record earnings for the first Quarter of 2007. New sales revenues, which exceeded 2006 first quarter earnings by 14%, presented the firm with the best results in its 27-year history.

The Dallas-based technology and telecommunications company has built a reputation in the Dallas area as a premiere service provider of telecommunications equipment and services. According to CEO and Founder Greg Osler, “We are extremely pleased with the growth of the company. We believe that much of that accomplishment can be attributed to our success in building on our relationships with clients and business partners, allowing us to bring on new clients and new technology offerings. With the growth that we have experienced in the Texas market, we have also made the strategic decision to add a Technology Center and Office Complex in North Texas. We anticipate that this addition will allow us to achieve growth levels near 30% over the next year as well.”

As a leading technology solutions provider, Mercury’s goals include helping businesses increase revenue, decrease costs and improve efficiencies through the use of technology. By leveraging best in class technology offerings from NEC, Inter-Tel, AT&T, Qwest, Dell, and many other industry leading technology providers, Mercury is able to provide the workforce of their clients with the functionality needed to produce and maintain higher productivity and more cost-effective organizations.

One of North Texas’ leading telecommunications firms since 1980, Mercury is committed to long term, high quality service for its client base. The Mercury team of operations professionals includes Technical Engineers with over 200 years of combined experience who have been involved with some of industry’s most innovative communications systems.
