FRANKLIN, Tenn. – HometownQuotes will be among the finalists at the Nashville Business Journal's 20th Annual Best In Business Awards for business excellence this Thursday, May 17 at the Downtown Nashville Doubletree Hotel.

"It is a huge honor to be considered for this award. There are so many deserving nominees. I'm just excited our company is a part of them," said HometownQuotes President and CEO Hunter Ingram.

With a dozen staff additions since the beginning of this year and more on the way, the young company has more than quadrupled its size in less than four years and expects to expand its corporate headquarters again within the next few months. This will be the company's fourth office move since the company's launch in 2003.

"It's a privilege to have your work recognized by the community and fellow businessmen and women. Regardless of the outcome, I'm looking forward to meeting the other finalists and exchanging business ideas," said HometownQuotes Chief Financial Officer Bob Klee.

The Nashville Business Journal's Annual Best in Business Awards recognizes some of the most interesting, dynamic, fastest-growing companies in Middle Tennessee. HometownQuotes was selected to be a finalist by a group of independent judges and will be profiled in the May 18 issue of the Nashville Business Journal.
