Boreland Lodge Hotel pays tribute to the upcoming Royal Highland Show in Scotland by opening its doors to tourists and participants and offering affordable lodgings. Tourists who are going to be in Edinburgh this June can take advantage of this much-anticipated event as it promises to be filled with delightful exhibits, fun shows, and good bargains.

Lodgings at Boreland Lodge Hotel guarantee guests of a comfortable, worry-free stay as it has en suite rooms equipped with the necessary amenities that guests can't live without. Exhibitors, competitors, and traders at the Royal Highland Show 2007 can also very well check out accommodations at the lodge as it also offers group bookings with personalized services.

A celebration of rural living, farming and past time in Scotland, the Royal Highland Show will showcase the best of livestock from all over the UK including sheep, cattle, and horses. Happening from June 21 to 24 at the Royal Highland Centre in Ingliston near Edinburgh, the annual Royal Highland Show will also have several competitions in its lineup such as the show jumping competition which will feature the best show jumpers in the UK, shearing competition, pole-climbing competition, forestry equipment competition, and many others.

Equestrian and livestock judging is one of the highlights of the show. There will also be exhibits, demonstrations on thatching, basket weaving, and other handicrafts as well as food competitions. Music and entertainment will also be a part of the show.

Visitors to the Royal Highland Show will find Boreland Lodge Hotel a convenient place to stay in as it is located in Fife, which is just a few miles north of Edinburgh. Pleasant as well as practical, Boreland Lodge Hotel provides guests with inexpensive accommodations in a warm, family-friendly atmosphere. Each room at the lodge already comes with a Scottish breakfast. For reservation inquiries, interested parties can log on to: www.borelandlodgehotel.co.uk.
