Airbox Express Aerocasillas, Panama's oldest and largest mail and package forwarding company, today announced their new "Snowbird" service for permanent and temporary Expats living in Panama.

"We will hold our client's mail and packages until they return to Panama at no additional charge or storage fees," said Yvonne Kilborn, Assistant General Manager and Head of Communications. "We also offer an option to forward mail or urgent packages via courier anywhere in the world. This option enables clients who travel extensively to receive important items in a timely manner instead of waiting until their return to Panama." Kilborn added, "This avoids the need to change billing and address details with banks and credit card companies. The client simply tells us which mail and packages they wish forwarded by courier and we hold the rest until they return."

Baby Boomer Expats and business people living in Panama rely on mail and package forwarding services to receive goods and correspondence from overseas in a timely manner. Clients use an address in Miami for their International Mail and Packages. "After arrival in Miami, they are processed, sorted and shipped to Panama via our private courier service and delivered to our clients throughout the country," said Kilborn.

Popular items shipped to Panama include DVDs, books, specialty auto parts and clothing not available in local stores.

Airbox Express Aerocasillas is the oldest and largest mail and package forwarding service in Panama and part of the AeroPost network – the largest mail and package forwarding service in Latin America with over 20 years of experience in the business and partners in over 32 countries in Latin America.

Based in the El Cangrejo district of Panama City, Airbox Express Aerocasillas has additional office locations in Albrook, Coronado, David and Boquete.
