DALLAS, TX, June 26, 2007 — Mercury Communication Services Inc., a leading provider of voice and data communications solutions for Texas businesses, today announced that it has been awarded the prestigious Double Diamond Award from NEC Unified Solutions' (NEC) Alliance Recognition Program, and is now an NEC Double Diamond Associate. Mercury is one of only two Texas companies to hold this coveted designation.

Double Diamond status is a three-dimensional method of recognition which takes into account Mercury's relationship with NEC, its competitiveness in the marketplace, and its overall technical expertise. Mercury earned "points" toward achieving the designation for sales volumes, technical and application certifications, and percentage of NEC solutions within their business. By achieving Double Diamond status, Mercury is awarded special benefits from NEC including special training and demos, designation on NEC's website and certain discounts and rebates.

Greg Osler, President and CEO of Mercury, commented on the award, saying, "We are extremely pleased to receive NEC's Double Diamond Award. This is a real honor and makes the fact that Mercury was once again among the top 10% of NEC dealers nationwide in 2006 doubly gratifying,"

NEC Unified Solution Vice President and General Manager, National Channel, Larry Levenberg, added, "With the involvement of companies such as Mercury, our Channel community has become a vehicle for increased sales, creating opportunities that help enterprises communicate more efficiently and effectively."
