Westlake Village, CA (June 27, 2007)— President of M. Loring Communications, LLC (AKA MLC PR) Mona Loring has been honored as a 2007 Cambridge Who's Who of Executives and Professionals. According to Cambridge Who's Who, the private membership is an honor and privilege associated with worldwide distinction. Loring's involvement is equated to a tribute to her professional achievements not exclusive to character quality, respectability and praiseworthy exertion towards her firm.

"It feels good to be a part of Cambridge's Who's Who. After extensive questionnaires and interviews, I felt even more accomplished to acquire the honor. Hopefully my elevated professional status can reflect on my wonderful clients because they're the ones who truly matter in the end," says Loring.

At only 28 years of age, Mona Loring brings solid experience in public relations including work in magazine writing, copywriting, marketing, and business development. Holding powerful positions such as public relations director, copywriter, entrepreneur and leader of media relations for a number of charity organizations, Loring offers original approaches and resourceful insight. Specializing in creative thinking and promotional development, Loring has successfully combined her passion for communications and creativity to establish a PR career that is both mentally stimulating and captivatingly diverse.
