London – July 6, 2007 - Today, the world renowned political scientist Gary K. Busch announced that he will join the Imperato Associates based in London, England.

The Imperato Associates is a strategic studies group that focuses on the Middle East, European Union, Latin America, and Africa.

Busch, a born American living in London is a Professor at Webster University in London, formerly a Professor at the University of Hawaii. In addition he has contributed to the Wall Street Journal, Spectator, and Russian Press.

Daniel Imperato, the chairman and founder of the Imperato Associates had this to comment regarding Busch joining the group, "Dr. Gary K. Busch is a fine man. He is someone who is incredibly knowledgeable about the world and will bring great experience to our group."

Most recently, Busch has focused his political writings on African politics.

Imperato has expressed deep concerns about the African continent, by calling attention to the growing influence of terrorists in the East African countries of Somalia, Kenya, Ethiopia and the Sudan.

In addition to his background in political science, the American born Busch has been engaged in trade and business on the African continent for many years. As a journalist, his writings are published throughout Europe, Russia and the Middle East. He has also consulted for foreign governments on transport and logistics.
