PhotoFX Pros, a Pennsylvania-based sports and action photographic company, has announced pictures from its coverage of the Big 33 High School football game are now available. The image files which were previously only available to participants, their families, respective high schools, and event organizers have now been released to the public for review and purchase.

"We have approximately 180 game photos taken on field during the game which can now be purchased by the general public," said PhotoFX Pros company president Steve Ickes. "As this was the 50th anniversary of the event and it has such a rich history, we were very excited to be there and make these images available to the general public," added Carol Ickes, marketing director for PhotoFX Pros.

PhotoFX Pros was providing photographic coverage of the Big 33 game for Pennsylvania Football News, an internet news web site reporting on Pennsylvania high school football.

The Big 33 football game pits the best high school football players from Pennsylvania against those in Maryland to raise scholarship money for future college athletes. Many Big 33 participants have gone on to play in the National Football League including Joe Montana and Tony Dorsett. There has never been a Super Bowl without at least one Big 33 Alumnus.

PhotoFX Pros is a premier provider of high-quality photographic services for local high school and youth sporting events in the Central Pennsylvania region. In addition to local sports coverage, PhotoFX Pros also provides photography services for corporate events and freelance services for several media outlets.
