Press release from: Deitel & Associates, Inc.

Maynard, MA, October 31, 2007—Deitel & Associates' new Regular Expressions Resource Center, part of its new Computer Science Series of Resource Centers, is a useful guide for software developers who want to learn more about Regular Expressions pattern matching capabilities. “Regular expressions capabilities are available in many popular programming languages like Java and C# (through their respective class libraries), C++ (through the Boost Libraries) and more,” said Paul Deitel, CEO of Deitel & Associates. “This Resource Center is a guide to the numerous online resources that will help you understand Regular Expressions from the theoretical perspective and through real-world applications.

The Regular Expressions Resource Center includes links to the latest regular expressions articles, tools, tutorials, webcasts, blogs and more. For further information about Deitel & Associates, or Deitel’s Resource Centers, contact Abbey Deitel or visit www.deitel.com/RegularExpressions/ or www.deitel.com/resourcecenters.html.
