Guaranteed search engine optimization company, Adviatech Corp., is offering a free web site to insurance agencies as part of their Insurance Agency SEO marketing plan.

Insurance agency marketing on the internet is becoming a more popular way for insurance agencies to get more quote requests and ultimately write more policies. Independent insurance agencies can have web sites created then optimized but agents that write for one insurance company, are sometimes limited.

Major insurance companies give their agents a profile style web site. The web site includes information about insurance products and links to ask the agent for a quote. However, the issued web page profiles are simply not compatible with search engine optimization techniques because they are hosted on the insurance company's web site.

In order to offer search engine optimization to agents that write for one insurance company at an affordable price, Adviatech created the Ready to Quote insurance agency web site. The web site is pre-made with content covering all insurance products. The content is then optimized for the region the insurance agency writes in.

By having a ready to customize web site, Adviatech is able to give the web site away for free as part of their insurance agency search engine optimization plan. Adviatech Corp., Vice President, Jason Bland, came up with the concept while working with the development team at the SpivO Network.

Bland explains, "Insurance agents are interested in two primary objectives. Serving their existing customers and getting more of them. The web site we're offering under the Insurance Agency SEO program allows insurance agents to offer customer support via their web site and get more quotes.”

The web site includes quote request forms, policy change forms, an on site blog, and optimized static content. Currently one simple design is available but new designs will become available soon. To promote the free insurance agency web site, Adviatech is offering special prices throughout the month of January.
