Atlanta, GA/March 20, 2008 – Strategic Vision, LLC's literary client Leigh Thomas, author of An Ordinary Journey, was interviewed on Fox News Channel's Fox and Friends First on her book and poignant story of her former husband's betrayal during their marriage on the Spitzer prostitution scandal. Thomas sought to explain her feelings and the emotions that other women feel when they find out that their husband has betrayed them. Thomas recounted in moving detail her story and mixed rush of anguish, despair, denial, and recovery that she faced. An Ordinary Journey has also been featured on ABC Radio's Good Morning America, Fox's Geraldo At Large and the Lineup. These shows have allowed Thomas to reach millions of viewers.

"Our commitment in book promotion is to have our authors to reach millions of potential readers that they would otherwise never have been in front of," said David E. Johnson, CEO of Strategic Vision, LLC. "Book publicity cannot guarantee sales but is merely a means of reaching potential buyers. In the case of Leigh, her story has touched many and she has heard from other people in similar circumstances which is a testament to her story and the courage she displays in sharing it."

Strategic Vision is considered a leading book publicity firm and represents authors of all genres. One of the ways that Strategic Vision works in promoting its authors is by offering them as experts on the subjects dealt with their book in which they apply key topics from their book and apply them before a wide audience. In addition, the book receives promotion through mention and reference in the media.
