Press release from: Winzero Technologies Inc

Winzero Technologies, a leading developer of Microsoft Windows server migration software, today announced ServerMigrator 2007 v5.09 with support for local account conversion and new consolidation features enabling users to easily migrate or consolidate Windows file servers, without account duplication.

With the growing need to migrate or consolidate massive amounts of server data, IT departments have been turning to large specialized storage systems and server virtualization. ServerMigrator 2007 makes it easy to migrating data from many sources and consolidate data storage without time-consuming and technically cumbersome processes.

"The newly added features in the latest release of ServerMigrator 2007, automates the task of consolidating servers without losing security permissions by removing the risk of duplicate local server accounts. Since its release last year, customers have been asking for a version that specifically allows them to identify and rename local server accounts or convert local server accounts to domain accounts before moving server data to larger storage devices ." said Akos Sandor, VP of Microsoft Enterprise Solutions at Winzero.

"Today, we are pleased to announce ServerMigrator 2007 v5.09 which addresses this need and is a result of custom development by Winzero for GlaxoSmithKline and Reuters NYC." said JP Hann, Marketing Director at Winzero. "By combining customer requests and Winzero development efforts, we now provide a solution to our customers that makes data consolidation painless without the risk of account duplication."

New ServerMigrator features allow administrators to:

- Analyze and report duplicate server accounts;
- Rename or merge duplicate server accounts;
- Convert local server accounts to domain accounts;
- Maintain security after rename or conversion process;
- Ensure that the migration is transparent to end users.
