February 2, 2006 -- AdSense marketers had long back understood that good research on keywords multiply their efforts in order to bring in most income. The only problem is, it will take a considerable amount of time to conduct all the research necessary to find the best niches and keywords.

Jeff Alderson and Rod Beckwith have spilled the beans and have created a software, Top Keyword Data (www.skrisk.info/tkd.html) that takes away the time of work from successful keyword researches and converts that to a simple take it and use it process.

Jeff and Rod say: "No matter how many niche websites you create, no matter how many Google AdSense ads you include, no matter HOW much time and effort you invest, there is only ONE thing that will determine the volume of monthly income you receive from Google... you absolutely MUST choose the "right" keywords"

There's been lot's of comments and opinions on earning money from AdSense advertising program. Every marketer earning an income from AdSense could give their different opinion, however all probably would agree on keyword research importance.

Web site owners have long been hesitating to explore this ever changing substance - keyword, to maximize their income, and stand along with the experts. This software intends to change that perception and make it possible for site owners to harness that raw power of keyword by in depth research. Jeff and Rod Beckwith are offering a special introductory discount for people who take quick action.

About Top Keyword Data:

Top Keyword Data is a software that gives you a list of well over 100,000 keywords. For each keyword, you'll see at a glance: the all-important cost per click (CPC) per keyword; the estimated number of monthly clicks (CPC); the total number of existing web pages in Google; the number of AdWords campaigns that are currently running; the number of searches conducted on Overture throughout the previous month.
