Press release from: Cockpit4u Aviation Service GmbH

As an exhibitor at the Professional Flight Training in London at the beginning of April 2008, the already existing customer relationships in the direction of UK market will be expanded and the growth of the company will thereby be continued.

"With a short period of time, we have succeeded in establishing Cockpit4u on the market as a reliable and professional training partner for airlines and new career entrants", says Dennis Pilz, Managing Director.

The trend towards the outsourcing of training services to providers such as Cockpit4u is also continuing in 2008. Particularly low-cost airlines are falling back on this model. The resulting advantages are obvious: cost transparency, flexible adaptation of training resources the growth of fleets, no need to provide own trainers and low risk are only a few points that should interest every CFO or flight operation manager.

In order to be able to offer the new and existing customers of Cockpit4u a very high standard of training and in order to cover the rising demand for training, the training centre at Airportcenter Berlin-Schönefeld is currently being expanded.
