The famed free scoreboard Tailgate Party goes high tech this football season at OffshoreInsiders.com. Sports bettors, free of charge, will have access to live NFL betting lines both for the preseason line and regular season odds.

“The difference is that on the scorephones, one had only one report available for a limited time before the next report would override it,” says CEO Joe Duffy. However, all features will be available at all times on the web version.

NFL bettors can get ATS (against the spread) trends, as well as free sports picks from the nation’s top sports handicappers GodsTips, Stevie Vincent, and the MasterLockLine. Punters also get game previews written purely from the standpoint of the football bettor.

One of our most popular features is late breaking and real-time football injuries and weather radar for fantasy football and gamblers alike.

The newest feature will be the betting trends where players can see who the public is betting on before investing with the sportsbooks. In fact, the consensus picks will be on the same page as live NFL scores.

Key sports betting news and notes will be released early in the week and updated with late-breaking information on game day. OffshoreInsiders.com will also have exclusive in-depth previews on the marquee games.

Fantasy football players will not take a backseat either as rotisserie football and sports betting information overlap. Placing a bet before taking full advantage of the NFL Tailgate Party is a dereliction of duty.

Note, some of the features will not become active until the regular season, but information will still abound for NFLX. However, the famed “preseason primer” with key player rotations, motivation and intangible data and more will highlight our NFLX features.
