Worth Minority Business Development Council (DFWMBDC). The DFWMBDC, along with 39 other affiliated councils, follows all standard procedures given by the National Minority Supplier Development Council.

In order to receive this certification, 51% of the ownership of an enterprise must be operated or controlled by minorities. Regardless of the physical size of the company, minority individuals must be U.S. citizens who are Native American, Hispanic, Black, or Asian.

“We are very excited to be MBE certified with DFW Minority Business Development Council,” Rishi Khanna, managing director, said. “Since we are headquartered in Dallas, being certified in Texas will provide great opportunity for ISHIR to work with companies with local presence.”

The DFWMBDC’s objective is to increase minority business revenues, business opportunities and to build a network for minority-owned businesses in North Texas.
