Wellington, 1 March 2006 - LawFuel.com, the Internet Law News Service, is about to launch its new-look legal news site to further enhance its position as the Internet's "Site of Record" for law news.

The new website, featuring a new appearance and graphics, will also permit greater functionality.

"LawFuel will be much more accessible to legal users. For instance, we've archived over 2000 articles which will be linked and referenced. We have new search functions and press release access," said John Bowie, LawFuel publisher.

LawFuel's affiliation with leading Internet news release organization PRWebDirect will also be enhanced.

"We will offer an even better deal to clients, permitting them to not only obtain the technology and expertise that PRWeb provide, but also access to the legal market via LawFuel," Mr Bowie said.

LawFuel wants those who wish to remain up-to-date with developments to register with www.lawfuel.com now.

The site is used by over half the top law firms in the world, as well as major law news organizations like the US Department of Justice and the Securities Exchange Commission.
