Karlsruhe (Germany) - For companies it is important to record numerous amounts of information at one time, in order to be able to react timely to all target-oriented situations. For this purpose the abas Business Software now contains abas Dashboards. They display important information which is clearly arranged on a screen.

Tailor-made information

Day by day ERP users have to handle a considerable amount of data. Now the abas Portal supports them by providing new data preparation options. The information and the data are allocated and visualized in a task-related manner. The dashboards are also called key figure information systems; they are included in the abas Portal, and are easily configurable. They are based on current financial figures, and thus allow you to make decisions based on up to the date information. The financial numbers are displayed in an intuitively perceptible display format. In this way the abas Dashboards greatly support corporate management. The information can be provided internally and externally through the Web service of the abas Portal. The programming language, Groovy, makes it possible to execute complex queries. For simple queries, the information will be compiled through the browser-based method.
