London, UK; Philadelphia, Lindon, USA; Hyderabad, India; Tuesday, 11th August, 2009: AppLabs, the world's largest software testing and quality management company, today announced a strategic partnership with Original Software, the Application Quality Management (AQM) vendor. AppLabs has entered into an agreement with Original Software to take to market the latter's innovative quality management suite. The agreement will likewise allow Original Software to position AppLabs' services into its own customer base.

Scott Andress, Vice President, Global Alliances and Service Lines at AppLabs commented: "As a tool agnostic services company, we focus on putting the right solution into the right project. We've spotted a compelling value proposition for our clients with Original Software's suite, which can be a great fit for most agile developments, can speed up time-to-market and can provide a silver bullet for those clients struggling to make the transition from manual to automated testing."

Colin Armitage, CEO of Original Software, said: "This partnership not only provides us with a strong route to market, but allows us to add services to our expanding portfolio. AppLabs' expertise in testing services and its global, skilled resource pool will be a value addition to our offering, giving customers the option to outsource projects or business functions or take advantage of specialized consultancy to optimize their IT and business quality management and testing capabilities."
